

Andi Stout, President

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you for your expressions of condolence on the loss of my father in July. It has been a tough ten months: my mother passed last September.

After her death, my siblings and I made several trips back to Indiana to visit Dad and help him out. My parents were married for almost 67 years and Mom was the organizer of their lives, so her death was very hard on Dad. As my brother said after Dad's death, Mom is probably again organizing their lives!

I feel I am truly experiencing the circle of life: as I grapple with no longer having parents, I revel in my grandson. I am just thankful that my parents got the chance to be great-grandparents.

Congregants were busy in July, increasing our visibility in the community. About thirty of us worked at the Habitat for Humanity site in Escondido on July 18 and 19. Little did most of us know how exhausting construction is! Some of us carried walls and helped put them up. Others installed dry wall. Still others helped transport supplies off-site. And we learned how to use assorted tools. I think we were all tired and some of us were sun-burned at the end of each day. But it was a wonderful experience. I hope we will participate again in the future. My thanks to Deb Coon for arranging this.

On July 22, about twenty congregants joined Rev. Sharon at a meeting of the Escondido Planning Commission. Several spoke in support of our UU values and urged the commission to reconsider their decision to deny a permit for an unaccompanied immigrant youth care facility. I was especially struck by the pleas of several teenage residents of Escondido and the passion with which they urged the commission to reconsider their decision. However, after about 90 minutes of public testimony, the commission stood by their decision to deny the permit.

Rev. Sharon was interviewed by KPBS for a segment that was broadcast that evening. She, along with Becki Collins and Andrea Seavey, was also in some news footage featured by other stations during their news shows that night.

We may not have changed the minds of the commissioners, but we were certainly visible and vocal in the community!

Let's keep on being visible, letting the community know we are here and what our values are.

Sunday Services

at 9:00 a.m. and 11:00 a.m.

August 3 - Michael Eselun, pulpit guest "Restraining the Beads"

Popular guest speaker and oncology chaplain Michael Eselun will explore our relationship to our own stories and how we use them in the attempt to make spiritual sense of our lives.

August 10 - Rev. Sharon Wylie

"Bread Communion" Multigenerational Service
In Earth-centered traditions, August is the time to celebrate the wheat harvest with the baking and sharing of bread. This Sunday, you are invited to bring bread to share as we celebrate the harvest together.

August 17 - Rev. Sharon Wylie

"My Still Small Voice Within Said WHAT?!"
Many of us have had the experience of feeling that an inner voice is telling us to take action. Call it an impulse, call it a gut feeling, call it conscience, or call it "a call." This morning, we reflect together on what this voice might have to say.

August 24 - Rev. Mark Kiyimba and Rev. Sharon Wylie

"The Importance of our UU Faith in Uganda"
This morning we welcome Rev. Mark Kiyimba into the pulpit. He leads the Unitarian Universalist church of Kampala, Uganda, which runs a housing program for orphans of HIV victims, HIV positive youth, and homeless LGBTI youth.

August 31 - Katy Kroll Swanson, pulpit guest "Good Enough"

Self-compassion is not a way of judging ourselves positively; it is a way of relating to ourselves with the same care and kindness we would show a good friend. It is loving ourselves as we are, flaws and all. In our highly competitive culture, how can we be more compassionate with ourselves and within our communities?

Minister's Message

Beloved community,

As part of my recent time off for vacation, I participated in a five-day silent retreat at Mary and Joseph Retreat Center in Rancho Palos Verdes. Except for one hour each day with my spiritual director, I was silent from 7 p.m. Sunday evening until Friday morning (I left a few hours before the retreat officially ended at lunch time because I really felt done with the retreat center food).

I thought that four full days of silence would be really difficult, but it turned out to be lovely. I learned that I spend a certain amount of time thinking about what I want to say, and of course, listening to others takes time and energy too. Freed from the obligations of talking and listening, I had more space for thoughts and emotions that had gone unnoticed.

And this was the first real retreat I think I've ever been on. I "retreat" with my fellow UU ministers in the fall and in the spring, but what we call "retreats" are actually "gatherings," and we are scheduled from morning through evening. I usually come back exhausted (and grateful for the time with my colleagues, which is always important, if not as restorative as I might wish).

No, this was a real retreat. Outside of meal times, there was nothing I had to do. Even my time with my spiritual director was optional (and I did pass him a note one day to let him know I didn't want to meet because I wanted to remain silent).

I walked the labyrinth each day. I colored a mandala one morning. I walked through the retreat gardens and spent quite a bit of time on my favorite bench. I read. I journaled a little, but not nearly as much as I had thought I might. I napped.

And the thing that surprised me most was how the days flew by. Each morning I would wake up and think, "How am I going to fill all the hours of the day?" And then it would suddenly be time for dinner. The week went unbelievably fast.

I thought a silent retreat would teach me about silence, but what I really learned about was time. Moving through time like floating on my back in the water, slowly, languidly, with no real sense of where I'm going or any urgency about getting there. The only difference between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. was the sun in the sky and the quality of light.

The retreat was a wonderful experience. I hope to keep some of what I learned about moving at a slower pace with me as I return to my regular life. And I hope the same retreat will be offered again next year. I would definitely go again.

Bright blessings, Sharon

Spotlight on Tim McKnight Ten Years at Chalice

In 2003, while working on my Masters Degree at the University of Illinois, I began to consider the possibility of moving to California upon graduation. Although I didn't know exactly what I was going to do once I got there, I was quite sure that I was not interested in working at a church ever again, considering the negative experiences I had endured in the past. Working in musical theatre was definitely a possibility, especially considering that just a few months before, I was the Music Director for my first professional musical, Ain't Misbehavin', at Zoo Theatre Company, a brand new company founded by Artistic Director Greg Wolf.

Also during this time I had a federal work-study job where I worked on educational websites. One of the other members of the web team was a doctoral student named Amy who was a "Unitarian Universalist". Amy often spoke of her church, how open it was, the great diversity of membership, and how welcome she felt there. I thought, "I guess I should look up this Univertarianist thing...or whatever it's called..." After visiting Southern California a couple of times, I decided to move to San Diego. I had no professional connections, but I felt it would be a good place for me to build my career as a musician and teacher. So on July 9, 2004 I drove into San Diego to start my new life.

At the same time I was moving to California, Chalice had been looking for a professional Music Director, but to no avail. They weren't getting any responses to their ads, so Susan Spoto, who was then the Music Committee Chair, suggested that they try the UCSD Job Board. It seemed like a long shot, but why not? Within days of getting into San Diego, I got an e-mail from Meghan Wolf, the sister of Greg Wolf who was the director I had worked with a few months before on Ain't Misbehavin'. She worked for the UCSD Performing Arts Department, and had come across an ad for a Church Music Director in Escondido, so she thought she would pass it on to me.

And the rest is history...

It's hard to believe that it has been 10 years since I came to Chalice, and what a journey it has been. I'm so glad that those synchronistic moments all added up to my discovering a church where I am fully accepted for who I am, not partially accepted for who people want me to be; a place where I really believe in the message we have to share with the world, instead of feeling hypocritical and conflicted; a place where I feel that people really care about each other, not where people just want to save each other.

Over the last 10 years, Chalice has cultivated a community that respects and values the power of music in our lives. We have a thriving music ministry that has brought so much to all of our lives. I am very lucky to have found such a place. As I begin my second decade at Chalice, I dream of how we can share the rich blessings that music has brought to us with others in our local community and beyond.

With gratitude,
Tim McKnight

Told in spare, elegant prose, both resonant and luminous, it is destined to become a classic. You've got questions? Email them to John Drewe at [personal info removed]

Social Justice Committee ~ by Peg Briggerman

Water

In 2012, the California Legislature enacted AB865 which stated that clean, safe, affordable and accessible water is a basic Human Right. To explore how this landmark legislation impacts our local community and County, the annual Social Justice Worship Service focused on the challenges faced by Escondido and surrounding communities to protect and wisely use our fresh water supplies.

Guest speakers, Barry Pulver, from the San Diego Regional Water Quality Control Board and his wife, Joy Williams, from the Environmental Health Coalition, described our City and County governmental water management structures, examined our current status, and recommended action steps that we could take as a Faith Community to ensure that our fresh water supply remains viable.

Also on June 29, we showed a movie from the UUSC (Service Committee) called 'Thirsty for Justice' which chronicled the passage of the bill and its impact on the state. After the movie, there was time for discussion.

Since the Gregory Canyon Landfill project has been stopped due to bankruptcy, there is not as much risk to our local water supply as there was, but a remaining concern is whether local water remains affordable to all residents.

Joy pointed out that there is still groundwater contaminated by industrial wastes under Felicita Park and in Felicita Creek due to industrial wastes from the Chatham Brothers Barrel Yard. This company is no longer in business, and has become a State Superfund site, but cleanup is not happening quickly enough. A new public action group called the Escondido Neighbors United (ENU):

(<https://www.facebook.com/escondidoneighbors>)

has made this problem one of its priorities, and recommended that the five-year Remedy Review not be finalized until a community meeting is held and additional actions are taken.

The city of Escondido maintains its own Water District: <http://www.escondido.org/utilities.aspx>. This excellent website describes the structure of the Escondido Water Division and its two lake facilities, Dixon Lake and Lake Wohlford. Water is then supplied from the Escondido-Vista Water Treatment Plant to more than 26,000 residential, commercial and agricultural customers. The web page contains links to departments and local activities as well as a Water Conservation Hotline: 760-839-4658. Barry's recommendation to us is to attend a local Water Board meeting, listen to the recommendations and decisions, ask questions about anything that isn't clear, and then ask what they are doing to ensure the basic human right to water to all residents of their district.

Chalice at Habitat for Humanity

Chalice's first Habitat for Humanity work days were a success, hard work on a two hot days and huge fun. Rev. Sharon delivered a welcome lunch break with boxes and boxes of elegant, interesting pizzas along with encouraging words. We helped build a small complex of two story duplexes on Elm Street. In addition to the build project, Habitat 'cleans up' the surrounding neighborhood, so that everyone benefits. That seems like good payment for those who live nearby and spend weeks listening to the hammering and pounding. As I was leaving, we stopped to thank the superintendent. He told us that most volunteer work groups behave competitively amongst themselves as they work. Instead, he found our Chalice work style to be cooperative and helpful toward each other. ~ Peg Briggerman
